As I mentioned in an earlier note, thank you and your colleagues all for your work on The Interrogator. I appreciate your quick response, and I always have understood that you have a task that will sometimes set you at odds with prospective writers. I do not envy you your positions. Please let your colleagues know that I thank them.

I have one sentence I truly must add to the text of The Interrogator. I have recently learned something to which I must allude. But, I must add this last sentence or the book could, by some, appear to mislead, when I take the greatest care to be accurate.

Please confirm this change is okay. I must send it to the printers immediately.
